$25 Optional Chase Bonus (Maintained on a separate Excel spreadsheet that will be sent out on weekly basis after Chase starts)

Just like the 2014 NASCAR Chase format the top 15 players with the most wins over the first 26 races will earn a spot in the Chase Grid with the 16th spot going to the season points leader if he or she does not have a win. If there are fewer than 16 different winners in the first 26 races, the remaining Chase Grid positions will go to those winless players highest in points. If there are 16 or more different winners in the first 26 races, the ties will first be broken by number of wins, followed by overall season points. Once the field of 16 is set it will drop the four lowest players after race 29 to 12 players, after race 32 to 8 players and after race 35 to 4 players. Any weekly wins by a chase player automatically advance them to the next round. It will be winner take all at the last race between the remaining 4 players for the $400 side pot.

*Spots will be filled in descending order of season points if people choose not to play.

Winner take all Any ties throughout the season will be broken by most season wins. If the tie still exists we will use top 5's then top 10's to break tie. If tie still exists it will be rock, paper, scissor to determine.
